"Red Turbans" Drive Mongols from Peking. Chue Yuan-chang established the MING Dynasty. By end of 13th Cen. all of China had been overwhelmed by the Mongols, but the regime soon won acceptance by the Chinese. As the 14th Cen. ran its course, China was subjected to a wave of rural rebellions fomented chiefly by inflationary prices & hi taxes, combined with the breakdown of flood control in the Yellow River valley. The incursions were often the work of nationalists.

recent centuries. One of these, the "Red Turbans," became powerful in the heartland of the YANGETZ valley by attracting adherents to the peasant cause from among the gentry and the official class. Its leader was a Buddhist monk, Chee Yuan-cheng, who seized Nanking in 1353, established control over the south & then expelled the Mongol Yuan dynasty from Peking in 1368. He became the first Ming emperor, with the name Cheng-wu.
